LAST DAY AT CAMP.

The last day of the camp meeting was one of consecration and devoted service The sunrise prayer meeting was the largest and most impressive of the series. Deacon

Ed White was the leader. "Praise is the Triumph of Faith" was the theme of the ladies' temple meeting, which has daily preceded the sermon of the morning. Rev. George V. Leech spoke of "Love the Philosophy of Jesus" as the only potent solvent of the hard social and national problems which confront our civilization Rev. C W. Pale preached the afternoon sermon to a much augmented congregation, for the last afternoon brought out a goodly county contingent. The children's hour was specially impressive, as Miss Miner bade farewell to the half hundred little enes whom she has so effectually won in he ten days' ministry among them.
Elder Wilson led the twilight service of song and testimony. There were many earnest responses to his appeal for a public expression of faith in God.

Psalm 51, 12th verse, was the Gospel exhortation brought by Dr. Huntly to the evening audience. "Restore Unto Me the evening audience. "Restore Unto Me t Joy of Thy Salvation" was the theme of practical appeal to a large and appreciative audience. Rev. A. J. Gill, who was announced to participate in this service, was prostrated by a severe attack of indiges-tion Tuesday night and was ordered home by his physician, leaving on an afternoon

Washington. He will later go to Emory Grove camp.
Revs. Pardew and Isaacs assisted Dr. Wilson in the revival service with which the day was closed. There were many conversions at this, as well as the earlier service.
Miss Ella Knight delighted the children by a special solo adapted to their youthful taste, which she sang at their last meeting. Miss Rose Cannon is being entertained at the cottage of her friend, Mrs. J. Bernet Cannon of 5th avenue.

Dr. Wm. Trail of Washington, D. C., has been visiting relatives in camp.

The "Busy Bees," under the direction of Miss Addie Mickle, will give a missionary benefit Saturday evening in behalf of an day with his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Redin Woodward. After the sacramental service, which followed the morning sermon, he was cordially greeted by a host of friends.

The number of communicants was 184. Rev.
C. W. Pate read the service.
Tuesday afternoon a number of country people attended the services, listening attentively to an earnest sermon by Rev. Dr. Whisner of Baltimore. Rev. George E. Maydwell, pastor of Waugh Church, Washington, occupied the nulnit at the Tuesday night pulpit at the Tuesday night service, preaching to a large assemblage. His text was "What good thing shall I do to inherit eternal life?" There were two responses to his appeal for expression of a desire for this eternal life.

POLITICS IN INDIANA

Hoosiers Favor an Active Policy Regarding the Philippines.

CRITICISMS OF PRESIDENT M'KINLEY

Alleged Feeling Between the Two Senators From the State.

INDIANAPOLIS, August 8, 1899.

More than a year must clapse before the people will be called upon to name a new President, and several months before the active work of the campaign will begin, yet the signs are multiplying that Indiana will again be one of the chief battle grounds. In 1860 Indiana and Pennsylvania settled in October who was to be chosen President in November, and ever since that time Indiana has been more or less the pivot on which the election has turned. Had Indiana failed the new republican party in 1860 in October Abraham Lincoln would not have been elected President in November, and the war would at least have been deferred four years. This political pivotal condition has given the state a prominence it would not otherwise have had, and it has made all Indianians politicians.

The politicians of Indiana are optimists of the most extreme type, in so far as the future of the parties is concerned, but as to the future of the country they are pessimists. That is to say, no party man can see any possible chance for a defeat of his party. To him success is as sure as the election day is to come. With him it is not a mere bluff to keep up an appearance, but is a reality. Thus, in 1894, when to the most casual observer from the outside traveling through the state the indications all were that the republicans would have an overwhelming victory, not a democrat could be found who was not fully convinced that hissparty would be triumphant. The politicians of Indiana are optimists crat could be found who was not fully convinced that his party would be triumphant. In 1896 it was the same way, and even after the election the democratic committee stuck to it for several days that they had been successful after the returns were in. They have not yet been able to see how they were mistaken. Republicans are just as optimistic, and even the populists, who never cast more than 15 000 populists, who never cast more than 15,000 or 20,000 votes out of a total of 600,000, are always sure of success.

Opinions of Each Other. As to the future of the country every republican believes that democratic success means destruction to all business interests, and every democrat is fully convinced that the future greatness and prosperity of the country depends absolutely on their snatching control from the republicans, while the populists not only believe, but absolutely know, that the overthrow, speedy and complete, of the republic can only be averted by discarding both the old parties. With these conditions of mind the parties are already lining up for the struggle of next year. As to the republicans, McKinley is still the favorite, but there has been a re-markable change from a few months ago. In 1892, just after the defeat of Harrison, Indiana republicans declared for McKinley. They supported him loyally at St. Louis, and gave him a rousing plurality at the election. Of the republicans of Indiana, 98 per cent of them are in favor of expansion; of the democrats, 65 per cent are in favor of the same, at least so far as a retention of the Philippines is concerned. Of the 98 per cent of the republicans fully 70 per cent are finding fault with the ad-ministration because the war is not prosecuted with the vigor they think it ought to be, and the same view is held by the entire 65 per cent of the democrats. They point to the fact that immediately after the success of Dewey, and when it first began to be suggested that the United States would demand the islands from Spain, the military men who had knowledge of the condition of affairs said it would require 100,000 men; the Spaniards said the same, as did the English, German and French papers, yet a small part of that number has been supplied. They also say that Mr. Mc-Kinley and his cabinet were of the same opinion and asked Congress to increase the regular army to that figure, yet when Congress refused, but gave authority for quite a large increase, the President let several months go by before he called for any of the troops authorized. Spirit of Criticism Aroused.

They cannot understand, they say, why, if in December last, Mr. McKinley said from early morn until almost midnight. 100,000 men would be needed, he did not begin the work of recruiting as soon as authority was given. At first they were not disposed to criticise the Cuban campaign. but now that the spirit of criticism has taken hold of them they are attacking that, and are holding the President responsible for his long adherence to Alger and Corbin. These are simply the grumblings that are heard in Indiana among the republicans, and they are heard everywhere, on the streets, in the hotel corridors and at the clubs, and are indulged in by almost everyone except the office holders, and thos who are still expecting office.

With the democrats, 60 per cent are in favor of free silver absolute, another 15 per cent are opposed to the idea, but will sup-port it because the party indorses it, while 25 per cent will work and vote against it. In 1896, fully 20,000 gold democrats in Indiana voted for McKinley. If Bryan is again the nominee, they will vote with the republicans next year. Bryan will get the delegation from Indiana without question. If the republicans were to select delegates now they would be for McKinley, but the signs point that unless the war in the Phil-ippines is conducted in the future with much greater vigor than it has been in the past, Mr. McKinley will have a struggle to secure the Indiana delegation next year. Senator Fairbanks supports the President, but it is understood that Senator Beveridge is hostile, and will criticise the administration of affairs in the Philippines with great vigor. This is currently reported among his closest friends here. The intimate friends of the junior senator are the most open in their criticism of the President. Hostility Between the Senators.

There is a hostile feeling between the wo senators. It is known that Senator Fairbanks stands very close to the President, and the office seekers are his friends, while the Beveridge men feel that they have been unduly slighted in the distribution of places. Among the adherents of Beveridge the talk is already common that he would make splendid presidential timber in 1904, if not in 1900. The young senator has already expressed his ambition to some time live in the White House, and he is as firm a believer in his star as ever was Napoleon. His friends are circulating quietly a paper drawn up to show at what an early age other men have risen to great heights of power, or accomplished some great work. All this is to point out that are cought not be counted by years but by great work. All this is to point out that age ought not be counted by years, but by talents. All this is preliminary for a campaign of active work for 1904. It is not believed the senator will oppose the retention of the Philippines, for he has hitherto been a strong expansionist, but that he will take an early opportunity, after the Senate meets, to criticise the slow work that has been going on toward a pacification; that he will attempt to show that a resort to arms was needless, and that the policy of the President is the cause of the present condition of affairs. These rumors as to his intention are founded on passages contained in letters he has written back to his tained in letters he has written back to his friends, and from statements made by him before he departed on his tour of observa-Taking all things into consideration, lively times may be expected in Indiana for the next year. Triple Tragedy at Canton, Ohio.

A terrible tragedy occurred three miles east of Canton, Ohio, Tuesday night, resulting in the death of Edward Eckinger, his wife and three-year-old daughter. Mrs. Eckinger evidently first shot her husband and daughter with a shotgun and Continuing, the speaker attacked the attitude of Mr. Hume in the case of the Rosslyn charter, claiming that the passage of such an act as favored by his opponent would jeopardize the future peace and prosperity of the county. In closing Mr. Caton appealed to democrats to stand by him on election day, reliterating pledges of faithful service. him on election faithful service.

Immediately upon the conclusion of Mr. Caton's address Chairman Clements introduced Mr. Hume to the audience. Amid great applause Mr. Hume began a speech which held the attention of the meeting to the end. In opening he stated that he was pleased to meet so many old friends again, and that several points had occurred to him in connection with the campaign which he wished to discuss.

"First, then," continued the speaker,
"may I be pardoned if I take up the matter, an important one, of the Memorial bridge. Many times I have interviewed senators and members of Congress on this subject, and in 1808, with the aid of our Subject, and in 1888, with the aid of our Virginia senators, I succeeded after a rebuff in the House in obtaining an appropriation of $2,500 for the borings and soundings of the bridge. In the winter of soundings of the bridge. He said in part: "While I was chairman of the board of survey the United States govern-ment photographed a road built under my supervision from Washington and Ohlo junction north. Later I was gratified to learn that General Stone embodied the photograph in his work en good roads at a minimum cost." Shortly after 10 o'clock Mr. Hume closed

Among the other speakers who urged support of the Hume ticket were Messrs. J. F. Haney and Curtis B. Graham of Alexandria county, the latter finally securing the adoption of the resolutions quoted his address, and was heartly applauded.

ADDED SCHOOL FACILITIES.

Pressing Need in Hyattsville-Building Operations.

Special Correspondence of The Evening Star. HYATTSVILLE, Md., August 10, 1809.

The school board has allotted a handome sum of money for the general improvement of the public school in this village. The work will begin immediately in order that the structure shall be ready for occupancy in September. The increased population in and about Hyattsville during the past year renders it imperative that additional school facilities be provided, and some action looking to this end, it is stated, will be shortly undertaken.

principal with Misses Sallie and Louise Gray of Laurel and Miss Bettie Hurley as assistants. The local trustees are Messrs. L. H. Campbell, John T. Hickey and C. H.

Mr. W. Taylor of this village has five cottages under construction, with as many more plans in his possession, which will be commenced at an early date. Mrs. Shields and Messrs. Mangum and S. A. Lewis are building cottages at Riverdale, while in the other towns along the line of the electric road building is just as active.

It is rumored that the new management of the electric road contemplate a material reduction in fares between this village and Washington. This matter will be determined at the initial meeting, which will be held in Washington some time next week.
